CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER’S REPORT

It would be difficult to imagine a more exciting time in Rugby League than we are currently enjoying in the three-year period from 2013-15. Of course the memory of a wonderful Rugby League World Cup in 2013 which showcased the very best of international Rugby League to the widest possible audience lives on; this was followed in 2014 by the excitement generated by the announcement of a new league structure which looks to galvanise competition in the professional pyramid by re-introducing the prospect of promotion and relegation. It will be interesting to measure, at the end of the 2015 season, the impact that this may have had on our primary objectives of delivering more viewers, spectators and of course participants in and around the sport.

Turning to 2014 in more detail, I am delighted to report that the RFL has achieved another strong year of turnover (£19.2m) and a profit (£219k) for the thirteenth consecutive year. A feature of the year was the winding down of the organisation following the expansion required to deliver the World Cup, together with the international programme for the year (the Four Nations against Australia, New Zealand and Samoa) held in the southern hemisphere. Notwithstanding this, investment in the sport by the RFL, through club payments and other expenditures was at its highest-ever level at £10.9m up from £10.7m in 2013. Finally, it would be worth pointing out that financial stability around the professional club network was at its best for some time with the increased revenue flowing into the club game providing some relief against the continuing hardships of a challenging economic climate.

BROADCASTING

Early in the year, the RFL and SLE Ltd agreed a new extended television contract with Sky Sports which would take the broadcasting of our sport on Sky through to 2021. Our new agreement provides both improved revenues and stability for the sport and allows our clubs to plan, invest and build over the medium term. It is no coincidence that the level of financial stability within Rugby League is currently better than it has been in recent years.

The new agreement with Sky Sports also offered the opportunity to develop Sky Try, a vibrant seven-year programme to develop and promote Rugby League within local communities across the country reaching 100,000 people per year. We recognise that most people touch the sport for the first time as children and this terrific initiative provides our sport, at long last, with precisely the right programme and resource to reach the maximum number of young people, through the club foundations and other appropriate groups.

INTERNATIONAL RUGBY LEAGUE

Internationally, England competed in the Four Nations held in Australia and New Zealand in October and November 2014 and whilst not making the final, delivered performances considered by most to have been both creditable and competitive.

The tournament commenced with a victory in the stifling heat of a Brisbane afternoon over an extremely combative Samoa side before the team travelled to Melbourne where they were extraordinarily unlucky to lose 12-16 against the Kangaroos. Similarly in Dunedin the team lost by the narrowest of margins when chasing the 10-point victory that would be required to qualify for the final. Over the three games England emerged from the tournament with a neutral for and against points total.

Of course in 2015 we look forward to entertaining the Kiwis, newly installed as the best team in the world, for what should be a thrilling three-match series featuring Rugby League’s debut in the Olympic Stadium in London.

On the wider international agenda, the Rugby League International Federation, to which the RFL, together with other leading nations, provides both directional leadership and support, had a very strong year. Considerable work has been undertaken to give the international game the structure, profile and resources it undoubtedly deserves and we can expect significant advancement in this area of the sport. The long held ambition to create an independent executive for the Federation came to a successful conclusion in early 2015 and the International Strategic Plan and Competition Programme will be a very worthwhile tangible legacy of the World Cup in 2013.

In Europe the Rugby League European Federation continues to go from strength to strength, with more nations playing the sport than ever before in this part of the world. Rugby League 9s made its debut as a demonstration sport at the 2014 Commonwealth Games in Glasgow in a further example of the growing breadth of the sport.

GEOGRAPHICAL EXPANSION
The expansion of Rugby League at semi-professional level in the UK was further strengthened by the decision to admit Coventry Bears into League 1 for the 2015 season. With Gloucestershire All Golds, Oxford and Hemel Stags before them, along with London Skolars and South Wales Scorpions, the admission of a new club, which in effect represents a whole region, in this case the Midlands, can only be seen as a positive for the sport as we look to achieve the widest possible national footprint.

COMMERCIAL
Commercially, the sport’s portfolio of partners continues to strengthen with First Utility taking the title sponsorship for Super League and Kingstone Press building upon their outstanding inaugural year as sponsors of the Championship. With other blue ribbon brands such as Gillette, Specsavers and Alcatel firmly committed to the sport, Rugby League can be proud of its stable of commercial partners with new partners Ladbrokes coming on board for 2015.

THE FUTURE
Moving forward, 2015 will see the adoption of the RFL’s new suite of Strategic Plans for the whole of the sport, covering the seven-year period to 2021. Detailed work on the Super League and Championship competitions and the Performance Strategy for England have been published while the Community Game Strategy continues to be developed through the second half of the year. Central to the RFL’s endeavours in 2015 is to become the very best National Governing Body on its journey in the pursuance of the High Performing NGB framework being promoted by Sport England as part of the modernisation programme for sport in the UK.

The sport has continued to make strong advancements on the back of the league restructure. The RFL acquired new office facilities at MediaCityUK, Salford, to build upon the presence achieved there during the Rugby League World Cup 2013. MediaCityUK is fast emerging as the location for dynamic media, marketing and sports organisations in the North West and the fact that the RFL has taken space on the developing complex is an appropriate reflection on the importance of the region to the sport.

The RFL has also upgraded office provision in London to ensure that one of the country’s leading sports has an appropriate presence in the nation’s capital city as we continue to defy misconceptions and challenge pre-determined stereotyping.

In 2015 it will be the 120th anniversary of the creation of Rugby League when 22 clubs met in 1895 to discuss the ruling which prevented them from paying their players. Of course the rest is history, as they say, and 120 years on, the sport of Rugby League has changed beyond all recognition to represent the very best in athletic contact-based collision sport. As you would expect, the RFL will be celebrating the 120th anniversary with a full programme, culminating with the unveiling of the statue at Wembley Stadium representing the rich history the sport has at that iconic venue, stretching back to 1929 when the Challenge Cup final was first moved there. There are, of course, a number of other celebratory events planned throughout the year to allow supporters and followers of Rugby League to engage positively with the sport and perhaps even raise some much-needed money for the myriad of Rugby League good causes.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION

Finally it is appropriate at this time to recognise and acknowledge the outstanding contribution of one of the RFL’s most long-standing Non-Executive Directors, Bob Stott, who is retiring from office. Bob has served the sport with great distinction for eight years in a Non-Executive capacity, bringing to his duties all the skills, knowledge and experience acquired over a lifetime in senior positions in retail management, culminating in his role as CEO of Morrisons supermarkets. Throughout his time on the RFL Board, Bob has never been anything less than diligent, conscientious and meticulous whilst instinctively seeking to support Board policy and executive efforts. In addition to his general duties as a NED, Bob has chaired the Championships Club Forums, the Audit Committee and the Risk Committee, amply demonstrating his highly-regarded attention to detail and professionalism. The RFL and the wider sport owe Bob a considerable debt for his endeavours on our behalf.

In closing can I thank everyone involved in the sport, in whatever capacity they work for the betterment of Rugby League. Whether playing, coaching, officiating, volunteering or simply watching and enjoying, we have a fine sport, accessible to all, built upon respect and discipline. There are always challenges to face in an ever changing world but we can be sure that the resilience and essential honesty of Rugby League, being a force for good, will ensure that our sport will continue to rise to the challenges we face. It is a great time to be a Rugby League supporter.

Nigel Wood
Chief Executive Officer
2014 was a year when the building blocks were put in place for a positive and exciting future whilst still getting on with the daily business of running the high-octane sport of Rugby League.

The ‘big ticket’ item was an unprecedented new broadcast deal with Sky Sports until 2021, guaranteeing Rugby League both fresh and increased levels of TV income and extended coverage of its top competitions.

In 2014 the RFL set about opening an exciting new base at MediaCityUK in Salford whilst retaining the organisation’s established home at Red Hall as well as its busy London office.

The game’s commercial, communications and marketing activity will be centred at the new Salford offices - and, once again, I am encouraged that there is significant upturn in these crucial areas of the promoting and projecting of our sport.

Modern thinking, coupled with modern facilities, will drive the sport forward and that work is underway. Understanding the customers better, helping the sport serve its valued fan base more effectively and ‘selling’ Rugby League to an increasingly aware commercial sector are all aspirations for the future.

Also, our combining of traditional media outlets and a targeted use of the social media ‘juggernaut’ to extend our public reach is vital.

Of course, part of 2014’s daily business was also to get out there and explain the new league structure to be introduced in 2015.

Change is always something to be made with care - and the return of potential promotion and relegation with a new format was something we needed to guide the Rugby League family for 2015 (including the Chairman!) through both conscientiously and in easy-to-digest chunks.

On the international front, England competed in the Four Nations in Australia and New Zealand. Once again the team showed real signs of progress but victories over the home sides still proved frustratingly elusive.

The sport, and its geographical spread, continues and we welcome Coventry Bears to the family for 2015.

And faced with a headline-grabbing unsavoury incident in the opening moments of the 2014 First Utility Super League Grand final, the sport, and those involved, showed admirable leadership in dealing with it swiftly, maturely and appropriately.

Perhaps, the most poignant moment for me personally was having the honour of laying a wreath at the Cenotaph in London on behalf of the RFL on Challenge Cup final eve. Along with representatives from finalists, Leeds Rhinos and Castleford Tigers, and other political and public figures, it marked our respect for those lost in the Great War.

And so, the sport moved forward into 2015 with renewed confidence, a feeling of stability and a real sense of purpose.

EMERGENCE OF A NEW STRUCTURE

How the new structure was arrived at and how it will work...

From 2015, Rugby League in the United Kingdom will adopt its biggest and most innovative change since the game moved to the summer months in 1995.

The new structure, which sees the return of promotion and relegation in a sustainable manner, replaces the licensing system in a bid to make every minute of every game matter from February to October.

Research and consultation with fans, players, sponsors, broadcasters and clubs was held to see how interest in Rugby League can be increased.

The return of promotion and relegation was the outcome from the meetings with everyone connected with the sport, combined with research carried out to ensure of creating its sustainability.

Members of the RFL visited fans’ forums to spread the message about how the new structure would operate.

Super League General Manager Blake Solly said: “We undertook a vast amount of consultation. Fans, sponsors, clubs, broadcasters and players were all consulted and informed about the change in structure.

“We were mindful of the uniqueness of the structure and in order for it to be a success, we had to make sure that everyone was comfortable with the rationale.

“There’s no doubt that the new structure gives the sport a compelling narrative from February to October. We had to make sure that there were no excuses for fans to not miss games or turn off their televisions.

“In order for promotion and relegation to return, we had to make sure it was sustainable in order to allow ambitious clubs to move forward and provide a safety net for clubs who might be relegated.”

With promotion and relegation being the focal point of the new structure, which aims to increase participation, spectators and viewers of Rugby League to help create some extra revenue for the sport, three objectives were outlined:

The first was for competition matches to matter and make them an interesting watch from the first kick of the ball to the last in the season.

Secondly, for more matches to have uncertainty of outcome in a bid for better spectacles.

Finally, for promotion and relegation to be restored, but in a sustainable way for clubs to build on promotion and be able to manage relegation from the First Utility Super League or the Kingstone Press Championship.

The new structure sees the 12 teams of Super League and the Championship each play 23 matches, home and away, as well as Magic Weekend and Summer Bash fixtures in their respected leagues.

At the end of the regular season, the Super League and Championship will split into the Super 8s - Super League, the Qualifiers and the Championship Shield.

The top eight of Super League will make up the first Super 8 with the bottom four of Super League joining the top four of the Championship in the Qualifiers and the remainder of the Championship clubs... competing in the Championship Shield.

The Super 8s will consist of seven games, with the winners of first v fourth and second v third in Super League progressing to the Grand Final at Old Trafford.

The top three in the Qualifiers will be automatically promoted to Super League, while fourth and fifth will play-off in the Million Pound Game for the final promotion spot.

In the Championship Shield, first v fourth and second v third will play-off to reach the final and the bottom two of the third Super 8 will be relegated to League 1.

League 1 comprises 14 teams playing 22 games - 11 home and 11 away. At the end of the regular campaign, first will play second for the first promotion place to the Championship with the loser of that game joining third, fourth and fifth in a play-off series for the remaining spot.

The innovative structure is unique to sport worldwide, and has what’s desired in the return of promotion and relegation as Rugby League enters its new era.
The introduction of Coventry Bears into Kingstone Press League 1 for 2015 will give professional Rugby League a firm foothold in the Midlands.

Coventry join the likes of Oxford, University of Gloucestershire All Golds, the rebranded Newcastle Thunder, North Wales Crusaders and South Wales Scorpions to give the sport its widest ever geographical footprint.

The Bears were founded in 1998 and within two years had clinched the Rugby League Conference Western Division title before winning the RLC Midlands Division in both 2001 and 2002.

Following a period of growth Coventry were admitted to the National Conference League Division Three in 2013, from where they joined 13 other clubs in Kingstone Press League 1 for 2015.

The division is the third tier of Rugby League’s exciting new structure and sees Coventry face regular fixtures against some of the newest and longest established clubs in the sport.

RFL Chief Operating Officer Ralph Rimmer said: “The Bears have made the stepping stone into League 1 at the right time, having undoubtedly benefited from the extra year they have had to prepare.

“The piece of work that has seen the entry of Coventry, the All Golds, Hemel and Oxford has changed the Rugby League landscape of this country and the next step would be the real advancement of one of those clubs up the competitions. Their stabilization and progress is a significant step forward for the sport.”

In 2012 Hemel Stags joined the professional ranks while the All Golds were granted entry to the sport’s third tier in 2013.

Oxford, were also admitted to Championship One for the 2013 campaign, just 12 months after their formation.

In March, Gateshead Thunder were taken over by Newcastle Rugby Limited, which is owned by the chairman of rugby union side Newcastle Falcons Semore Kurdi.

The expansion of League 1 with Keighley Cougars, Rochdale Hornets, Barrow Raiders, North Wales and Swinton Lions relegated from the Championship, sees League 1 increase from nine teams to 14 for 2015.

After 22 games, first and second in the League 1 table will fight for promotion to the Championship and the losing side will join third, fourth and fifth in a play-offs series to claim the second promotion spot, which could see one of the news teams work their way up the ladder.
A new base for the RFL in the UK’s vibrant media hub...

2015 will see the commercial, marketing and communications departments of the RFL and Super League relocate from Leeds to Salford’s MediaCityUK.

The move aims to raise Rugby League’s profile nationally and be a focal point for the sport in the region.

The administrative headquarters for the Rugby League World Cup 2013 was housed at The Greenhouse in MediaCityUK, which was the most successful tournament on the international stage in the sport’s long history.

The commercial, marketing and communications departments, who join the ticketing and events departments at MediaCityUK, will be based in Quay West on the banks of the Ship Canal in a 4,000 square foot office space close to national broadcasting companies such as BBC Sport and ITV.

Swapping West Yorkshire for Manchester means that the RFL becomes the first major sporting organisation to base itself at MediaCityUK.

Super League General Manager Blake Solly said: “MediaCityUK was a great office space during the World Cup in 2013. Being based in MediaCityUK is great in terms of being close to media, marketing and sponsors. The chance to take a longer lease for Rugby League to be based in Media City was too good to refuse. The offices are a modern, vibrant base for the RFL in Manchester and we’re really proud of it.”

With offices now in Manchester, Leeds and London, the RFL is able to liaise with everyone involved with the sport from three different locations in the country.

The move to MediaCityUK is part of the new era that Rugby League will embark on in 2015 in the sport’s most exciting time since it moved to the summer era in 1995.
Following the successful 2013 Rugby League World Cup, it was back to domestic duties for the RFL Events Team in 2014.

May saw a return to the Etihad Stadium, the third year of Magic Weekend to be hosted there. Blue skies and bright sunshine was the order of the weekend, and the action on the pitch did not disappoint the 67,000 fans who attended. It has become clear that Magic Weekend is not just about the on-field action, with attendees enjoying the Fans’ Village and in-bowl entertainment just as much.

The Tetley’s Challenge Cup final weekend saw a unique event take place at The Cenotaph in central London on the Friday morning. The RFL, along with the two competing finalists Leeds Rhinos and Castleford Tigers, remembered those servicemen who had lost their lives in action. It was a poignant occasion for all involved, and for the hundreds of fans who attended many of whom lined the streets in their club colours.

The action on the pitch did not disappoint with Leeds taking the trophy they had so longed for. The RFL’s VIP guests were treated to memories from yesteryear in The Great Hall, courtesy of Professor Tony Collins and the RL Heritage Project.

The showpiece event in the Super League calendar, the First Utility Grand Final, certainly lived up to its status as one of the UK’s best events. The atmosphere pre-match was electric, helped by music from the band James and their iconic anthem ‘Sit Down’, as well as the 20,000 club flags given to supporters.

This brought the curtain down on a successful year for the Events Team, with the autumn spent looking ahead to 2015 with much enthusiasm as we prepared for the ‘New Era’.

JAMES WOW THE SUPER LEAGUE GRAND FINAL CROWD
After their exploits in the Rugby League World Cup 2013, England headed Down Under to compete in the 2014 Four Nations in Australia and New Zealand.

The Four Nations was the first competition England were involved in since their narrow World Cup semi-final defeat by New Zealand at Wembley Stadium.

England coach Steve McNamara, who was appointed as the assistant coach of Sydney Roosters ahead of the 2014 season, included nine uncapped players in his squad: Joe Westerman, Elliot Whitehead, Josh Hodgson, Dan Sarginson, Daryl Clark, Mike Cooper, Stefan Ratchford, Matty Smith and Joe Burgess.

McNamara included six NRL players in his squad: NRL Grand Final-winning... brothers George and Tom Burgess from South Sydney Rabbitohs, James Graham of Canterbury Bulldogs, New Zealand Warrior Sam Tomkins and St George Illawarra Dragons duo Gareth Widdop and Mike Cooper.

With Kevin Sinfield retiring from international Rugby League in early September, Wigan Warriors captain Sean O’Loughlin was chosen to lead the side.

England began the Four Nations with a competitive game against Samoa. At one point it looked as though the Pacific Islanders would spring a shock result at Brisbane’s Suncorp Stadium in the opening game of the tournament but England came through 32-26.

However, they suffered a narrow defeat in their next game against favourites Australia in another close contest. A try by Michael Jennings opened the scoring but England hit back with touchdowns from Ryan Hall and Kallum Watkins, with Widdop adding a conversion to lead 10-4 at the interval.

However tries by Bent Hunt and Greg Inglis, plus a goal from Cameron Smith, gave Australia a 16-12 lead going into the final minutes of the game. England looked to have salvaged at least a point when Hall crashed over in the corner but the try was disallowed and the game was lost.

England’s next game against New Zealand was win or bust. Another tough contest saw the Kiwis make it two wins against England in the space of a year. Two tries from Jason Nightingale, and another from Manu Vatuvei gave New Zealand a 16-14 victory and put them into the final where they went on to defeat Australia.

With no Four Nations tournament in 2015, England will face New Zealand in a three-match series with games to be played at Wigan’s DW Stadium, Hull FC’s KC Stadium and the Olympic Stadium in London.

The series will provide England with the preparation needed for the Four Nations the following year and the 2017 World Cup which will be hosted Down Under.
St Helens claimed their first Super League title since 2006 as they defeated the 12 men of Wigan Warriors in front of a 70,102 crowd at Old Trafford.

Wigan forward Ben Flower became the first player to be sent off in a Grand Final when he was shown a red card for punching St Helens half-back Lance Hohaia.

Saints, who had managed to grab the League Leaders’ Shield following Castleford Tigers’ defeat to Catalans Dragons in the final round of the regular season, were 6-2 down at the break through a Joe Burgess try.

However, in the second half touchdowns from Sia Soliola and Academy product Tommy Makinson secured St Helens’ fifth Grand Final win.

Coach Nathan Brown, who was heading back to Australia, helped steer St Helens towards Grand Final victory after the club had made five successive appearances on Rugby League’s biggest night of the year without coming away with the spoils.

St Helens’ dramatic triumph capped off a thrilling season for Super League, which saw Castleford accomplish their first top-four finish since Super League’s inception.

The Tigers, who proved to be the surprise package of 2014, were within 80 minutes of topping the table at the end of the regular season for the first time in their history but they fell at the final hurdle against Catalans in Perpignan and were eliminated from the play-offs by fifth-placed Warrington Wolves.

Man of Steel Daryl Clark was at the heart of the Tigers’ success, and his solo effort against Widnes Vikings was one of the stand out tries of the season.

Beaten Grand Finalists Wigan, who finished second, displayed their attacking prowess once again as they notched up an impressive 834 points - the highest in the league.

Huddersfield Giants, who claimed the League Leaders’ Shield in 2013, finished third, but fell to Catalans in the play-offs, who themselves had claimed the scalp of Leeds Rhinos in week one of the play-offs.

The Rhinos, who finished in their second lowest position in the summer era of sixth, endured a disappointing second half of the season after not registering a win in Super League since the end of July.

Despite Catalans finishing seventh, their play-off surge saw them leave Leeds and Huddersfield stunned with full-back Morgan Escare a shining light for the Dragons, chalking up 27 tries in the process. They were 80 minutes from a first-ever appearance at Old Trafford but fell to eventual winners St Helens.

Widnes claimed notable wins against the likes of St Helens, Wigan and Warrington during the campaign and recorded their first play-off appearance since their readmission into Super League.

Hull Kingston Rovers missed out on the play-offs by three points, as did the re-named Salford Red Devils, whose high-profile recruit Kevin Locke couldn’t inspire the Red Devils to a place in the top eight.
Hull FC and Wakefield Trinity Wildcats steered clear of relegation, but their appearances in the Magic Weekend, which saw a record attendance of 64,552 across both days, were games to forget, succumbing to defeats by Hull KR and Castleford Tigers respectively.

Bradford Bulls’ turbulent campaign resulted in the former Super League champions losing their top-flight status for the first time in over 40 years.

The Bulls, who have been Super League champions four times, were dogged by financial problems, which saw them deducted six points for entering into administration.

Like Bradford, London Broncos lost their Super League status and were doomed as early as July. The Broncos only recorded one victory all season - a home win against Leeds Rhinos.

Both teams embark on life in the Championship, and will have to fight for their way back into Super League as Rugby League heads into its new era.
Leeds Rhinos claimed their first Challenge Cup final victory since 1999 when they defeated Castleford Tigers at Wembley Stadium.

During that 15-year period they had been to six Challenge Cup finals and lost them all, including three on the trot between 2010 and 2012.

The 77,914 crowd witnessed Ryan Hall, the competition’s joint top try-scorer, charge his way over the line twice, a performance which earned him the Lance Todd Trophy as man of the match.

Tom Briscoe and Danny McGuire, who slotted over a drop-goal four minutes from time, also touched down for the Rhinos who never trailed in the game despite tries from Daryl Clark and Oliver Holmes for Castleford.

The Rhinos began their road to Wembley with a dominant display over Wakefield Trinity Wildcats and recorded an impressive win against St Helens in the fifth round at Headingley Carnegie Stadium.

However, they were made to work for their fourth Challenge Cup final appearance in five seasons by Leigh Centurions in the quarter-finals. The Championship side matched Leeds up until the last 13 minutes, when tries from Robbie Ward and Zak Hardaker, as well as a drop-goal from Kevin Sinfield, secured a 25-12 victory that sent the Rhinos into the last four.

Leeds put in another strong performance against fellow top-flight opposition Warrington Wolves in the semi-finals, with two tries from Hall, as well as touchdowns from Briscoe and Joel Moon, sending the Rhinos back to Wembley.

Castleford’s route to the final began with two comprehensive victories against Batley Bulldogs and Sheffield Eagles and then saw them spring an upset in the quarter-finals by inflicting Wigan Warriors’ first home defeat in a Challenge Cup tie since 1986.
Tries from James Clare, Kirk Dixon and Lee Jewitt put the Tigers in the semi-final draw where they were convincing 28-6 winners over Widnes Vikings, which included a try for the ever-impressive Clark.

Rugby League’s oldest competition saw two Championship sides in Leigh and Keighley Cougars reach the quarter-final stage only for both teams to lose out to Super League opposition in Leeds and Widnes, respectively.

The fourth round of the Cup was the entry point for the Super League teams, and the 2006 finalists, Huddersfield Giants and St Helens, served up a cracker at the John Smith’s Stadium with Luke Walsh’s drop-goal separating the two teams after Danny Brough’s attempt was ruled out.

The third round saw community clubs Milford Marlins, West Hull, East Leeds, Hull Dockers, Pilkington Recs, Wath Brow Hornets, Kells, Normanton Knights, Egremont Rangers and Wigan St Patricks pitted against Championship and Championship One opposition, but all were unable to progress to the next stage.

Despite their off-field troubles, Bradford Bulls, who last won the competition in 2003, booked their place in the quarter-finals following wins over Oldham and Catalans Dragons before succumbing to Warrington Wolves, 46-10 at Odsal.

Yet it was ultimately Leeds and Castleford who made it an all-West Yorkshire showdown at Wembley with the Rhinos ending 15 years of Challenge Cup heartache.

Walsh’s drop-goal separating the two teams after Danny Brough’s attempt was ruled out.

From grassroots rugby to Wembley Stadium, The Cup is the pinnacle of every club’s calendar.

77,914 fans witnessed the Rhinos lift the Cup after a 15-year wait.
Centurions lead the way...

Leigh Centurions rounded off an impressive season in the Kingstone Press Championship by defeating serial finalists Featherstone Rovers in the Grand Final at Headingley Carnegie Stadium.

Paul Rowley’s side only lost one league game throughout the regular season and defeated Doncaster and Dewsbury Rams in the play-offs on their way to the final.

The Centurions cruised into an 18-0 lead inside 22 minutes at Headingley through tries from Matt Sarsfield, Gregg McNally and Tom Armstrong, all converted by Martyn Ridyard.

Featherstone, who were playing in their fourth Championship Grand Final in five years, clawed their way back into the contest through Will Sharp’s double strike but further scores from Adam Higson, Sam Barlow and Ryan Brierley pushed Leigh further in front for a well-deserved 36-12 win.

Leigh’s achievements in 2014 were reflected in the Championship awards with Brierley, who touched down over 40 times, claiming the Young Player of the Year award with his half-back partner Ridyard taking the honours of Player of the Year.

Although the Centurions ran riot in the Championship, Rovers finished a strong second having gone on a four-match unbeaten run heading into the Grand Final.

Second spot was all but decided when Featherstone squared off against Halifax at The Shay in August with Rovers ending Halifax’s nine-match winning run to leapfrog them into second place.

Doncaster, who defeated Halifax the week after the Featherstone game, finished in an impressive fourth under the stewardship of Paul Cooke. In their second season back in the Championship they also inflicted on Leigh their only league defeat of the campaign.

Sheffield Eagles, who came into the 2014 season as the back-to-back champions, finished in fifth and were 80 minutes from another Grand Final appearance until they were defeated by Featherstone.

Mark Aston’s men played their home games at Owlerton Stadium following the demolition of the Don Valley Stadium. Dewsbury Rams improved on their seventh-place finish in 2013 to finish sixth, and came within one game of an unexpected Grand Final appearance following their impressive 25-0 win against Halifax, who had sacked head coach Karl Harriston two weeks earlier.

With the top six teams from 2014 all vying for a place in the Grand Final, the 2014 season was remembered for the drama served up on the final day of the regular season which saw five clubs relegated as Rugby League embarked on a new era for 2015.

Bobbie Goulding’s Barrow Raiders were the first team to be relegated when they fell to a 34-14 defeat to Dewsbury in July and Swinton Lions joined them in early August.

Rochdale Hornets and North Wales Crusaders followed in August, too, when four teams battled it out for Championship survival.

Keighley Cougars joined the four other already-relegated teams into League 1 following their final-day defeat to Featherstone, with Whitehaven, Workington Town and Batley Bulldogs playing their part in a bid to preserve their Championship status.

With Bradford Bulls and London Broncos joining the Championship, the battle for promotion promises to be intense as all 12 clubs will be hoping to force their way into Super League in the new era for Rugby League.
Hunslet Hawks earned a swift promotion back to the Kingstone Press Championship in dramatic fashion with a Thomas Coyle drop-goal in golden point extra-time sealing a 17-16 victory over Oldham in the Grand Final at Headingley.

Oldham, who have now appeared in seven losing Grand Finals, led 10-6 at half-time through tries from Steve Roper and Dale Bloomfield, with Roper adding a conversion. Jimmy Watson touched down for Hunslet and David March converted but they took control in the second-half thanks to tries from James Duckworth and Coyle with March adding another conversion.

However, in the 74th minute Danny Langtree crossed for Oldham and Roper levelled the scores with the conversion. Danny Ansell and Richard Moore attempted to win it for Hunslet but both drop-goal attempts failed, which sent the game into extra-time. Coyle’s one-pointer was to prove third time lucky.

Hunslet, who were relegated in 2013, reached the final following a 32-24 victory over League Leaders York City Knights but they had to overturn a 12-0 half-time deficit to do it.

Oldham, who finished third in the table, had defeated York in the qualifying semi-final. Ironically they had beaten Hunslet in the qualifying play-off by a single point, a drop-goal by Josh Crowley proving crucial.

Promotion for the Hawks saw them part of the exciting new Championship structure. Five sides were relegated to make it a 12-team competition with Bradford Bulls and London Broncos joining them from Super League.

After 23 rounds, the top four of the Championship will join the bottom four of Super League competing in the Qualifiers with the remaining clubs in the Championship battling it out for the Championship Shield.

The bottom two clubs in the Championship Shield 8s will be relegated to League 1 in the new era of Rugby League.
HONOURS BOARD

A look at some of the outstanding achievers in 2014...

MAN OF STEEL

Daryl Clark capped off a fine 2014 for his club, Castleford Tigers, by taking both the Steve Prescott Man of Steel Award and Super League's Young Player of the Season accolade.

Clark became only the third player in the 37-year history of the Man of Steel awards to claim both titles, after Leeds hooker David Ward in 1977 and Widnes centre Joe Lydon in 1984.

The 21-year-old was instrumental in the progress of the Tigers, his lightning breaks from dummy-half being a particular feature. This form earned him an England call up for the Four Nations and he made his presence felt with his first touch of the ball. Coming off the bench against Samoa he created a wonderful try for his club-mate Michael Shenton.

COACH OF THE YEAR

It was no surprise that this honour went to Daryl Powell, coach of the Castleford Tigers. Daryl took over in the middle of the 2013 season and turned around the fortunes of the club in remarkable fashion. He got the best out of his players and his team while playing a sparkling brand of rugby to live up to their nickname of 'Classy Cas'.

The Tigers made their first appearance in the Challenge Cup final since 1992 and came within one game of finishing at the top of the First Utility Super League.

LANCE TODD TROPHY

Leeds Rhinos and England winger Ryan Hall earned the man of the match award in the Tetley’s Challenge Cup final at Wembley. Hall demonstrated his lethal finishing with two tries, one in each half, which helped the Rhinos to lift the trophy for the first time since 1999.

HARRY SUNDERLAND TROPHY

St Helens and England hooker James Roby won the man of the match award in a highly charged First Utility Grand Final at Old Trafford. There was plenty of incidents in their victory over great rivals Wigan Warriors but Roby’s class shone throughout.

He was on the field for the full 80 minutes, putting in a huge tackling stint as well as being a constant threat from dummy-half. Roby’s composure shone through in the final 30 minutes when, after a rocky start, he helped to steady the St Helens ship as they marched on to victory.

KEVIN SINFIELD MBE

England and Leeds captain Kevin Sinfield was made an MBE in the Queen’s Birthday Honours in 2014.

The 34-year-old is one of the most successful players in Super League history. He has led the Rhinos to six Grand Final victories and three World Club Challenge triumphs as well as Challenge Cup final glory in 2014.

The Oldham-born player has spent his entire career with Leeds, making his debut as a 16-year-old in 1997. He is the club’s record points-scorer and is the highest points-scorer in Super League history and the third highest in British Rugby League history, behind Jim Sullivan and Neil Fox MBE.

During a stellar career he has played loose forward, hooker and stand-off. The former England captain has won the Lance Todd Trophy, the Harry Sunderland Trophy and the Golden Boot, one of only four British-based players to receive the latter award.

SALLY BOLTON OBE

Sally was awarded an OBE in the 2014 Queen's Birthday Honours list. As Rugby League World Cup 2013 General Manager she led a team that delivered the most successful international tournament in the sport’s history. Sally spent seven years in her most recent spell with the RFL, during which time she held positions as the RFL Events Director, RFL Director of Projects and Planning and, latterly, RLWC2013 General Manager.

The sporting world took note of her success with the RFL and she left later in the year to take up a new position as Managing Director of the Organising Committee for the World Athletics Championships in London 2017.

RFL ROLL OF HONOUR

Three people, who have made extraordinary contributions to the game of Rugby League had their achievements recognised in 2014 when they were inducted onto the RFL Roll of Honour.

Natalie Gilmour, Ron Girvin and Keith Burhouse were added to the list which was introduced in 2003 and recognises individuals whose efforts encompass exceptional service across both playing and off-field service, and those unsung heroes whose work behind the scenes is so essential to the fabric of the game.

Natalie Gilmour’s inclusion comes as a result of her role in developing Women’s Rugby League. She has enjoyed a 15-year international career, appeared in every tour and international tournament since 2000, captained her country since 2007 and led her country in two World Cups – including last year’s Festival of World Cups – all the while juggling massive career demands in the Police Firearms Department and contributing massively to the community game.

Ron Girvin’s sheer longevity and commitment to Rugby League has earned him a deserved place on the RFL Roll of Honour. He has been heavily involved in the sport since writing about the community game in 1955 and working in administration for the North West Counties (NWC) competition for over three decades. Ron has received a multitude of awards for his service to the game including President of North West Rugby League and is still the North West Counties League secretary.

Keith Burhouse played an active role as a volunteer for 30 years. A Huddersfield fan for more than six decades, Keith dedicated himself to helping his beloved club, carrying out a vast array of voluntary tasks from replacing roofs and rewiring the old Fartown ground to driving the team bus and raising money for associated charities. During 2013, Keith catalogued the collection at the Heritage Centre and arranged for it to be stored securely until a new home is found.

MATT KING OBE

Matt King OBE collected two of the most prestigious awards at the Spinal Injuries Association’s 40th anniversary celebrations in 2014.

Matt, who was paralysed from the neck down in a tackle during his first game for the London Broncos Academy in 2004 at the age of 17, was commended as a positive role model for spinal cord injured people and for his charitable work.

He shared the Inspirational Achievement Award for Adults with Lucy Robinson and then claimed the main honour; The Stephen Bradshaw Award for Rebuilding Lives after a SCI.

Matt’s latest accolades sit alongside his OBE awarded to him in the Queen’s Birthday Honours list in 2012.
2014 was an exciting period as the impact of Rugby League World Cup 2013 started to show tangible benefits to the commercial revenues at all levels within the domestic game.

Overall, commercial income grew by a third across Super League as First Utility commenced their new three-year partnership and several new partnerships were unveiled, including Alcatel, Isuzu and Specsavers.

The Magic Weekend Fan Park at the Etihad Stadium was the biggest yet, with existing and new partners all benefiting from the opportunity to engage with fans by being able to showcase their products and services.

The year also saw the end of the Tetley’s Challenge Cup sponsorship... agreement after Carlsberg UK decided to move investment into new brands within their portfolio. However, Carlsberg UK still remain committed to the sport with long term pouring rights deals with several clubs, including Leeds Rhinos, Castleford Tigers and Dewsbury Rams.

In the second half of the year, the commercial team commenced negotiations with Ladbrokes, BLK and Kingstone Press which culminated in outcome to both grow revenue and replace existing commercial partners. Ladbrokes signed a three-year agreement to sponsor the Challenge Cup from 2015 and also become the official betting partner of the First Utility Super League. BLK replaced ISC to become the official kit partner to the England Rugby League team and Super League match officials in a four-year deal that commenced in December 2014.

Finally, Kingstone Press Cider elevated their position within the game by adding to their title sponsorship of the Championship and League 1, with additional Super League rights and also extended their agreement with England until 2017.

In August, Chris Rawlings joined the RFL as the new Commercial Director, based at MediaCityUK. Chris has previously operated with leading sports and entertainment agencies, Sport Five and James Grant PLC and is highly respected in the industry having represented global brands and international governing bodies, including UEFA.

Chris’s role is to further grow sponsorship revenue across the sport across all levels and also assist Blake Solly in exploiting other areas of the commercial portfolio, including digital and the RFL Events Department.

In conclusion, Rugby League’s commercial portfolio is now respected across the UK sports market in terms of the quality of brands that have invested in the sport for the long term. It is important that we now ensure that these new partners are well serviced and hopefully remain committed to the sport, as we seek to further grow the family of sponsors in the New Era.
2014 saw the re-brand of Student Rugby League to University and Colleges Rugby League which is a return to its original name when the competition was started by pioneers Andrew Cudbertson and Jack Abernathy many years ago. The decision was made by the University and College Rugby League Board to ensure the name continued to reflect the individuality of the University and Colleges programme as they both develop.

The university programme continued to progress at a rate of knots in 2014. The new RFL Higher Education Offer was launched, which was based around five key strategic themes for the sector - Performance, Participation, Employability, Player Experience, Income Generation and Recruitment.

Within the participation strand, a new Development 9-a-side festival pilot was launched which has been developed around participant insight. Development 9s are less formal, social-style festival events which take place on weekends and evenings away from traditional Wednesday afternoon student sport. The festivals have been created to allow new teams and individuals the opportunity to play in a less formal environment without having to commit to regular BUCS League competition.

The pilot, held in Yorkshire and the Midlands, has engaged 10 new teams of which three have transitioned into the BUCS competition. The Development 9s festivals will be rolled out nationally in 2015-16 and are expected to significantly increase engagement in Rugby League within the university sector.

Competition
Leeds Beckett dominated the BUCS Championship finals. They took both pieces of silverware at the BUCS Big Wednesday, held at Surrey Sports Park in March 2014. Leeds Beckett first team defeated Loughborough in the Championship Final and were crowned BUCS Champions for the ninth consecutive season. Their second team were victorious against University of South Wales in the Trophy final.

Representative
England Universities were crowned the 2014 Four Nations Champions after beating Wales 32-20 in the final of the competition which was hosted at Nottingham University.

2014 was also featured Great Britain and Ireland Students, a team which runs every three years. A squad of 25 players were selected from those competing at the Four Nations. The Great Britain and Ireland squad were crowned the 2014 RFL Associations Cup winners after defeating GB Police, GB Teachers and GB Armed Forces.

The Great Britain and Ireland squad set out on a two-week tour of South Africa in September and were undefeated in a three-game Test series against South African Students.

Higher Education Manager James Szymik said: “2014 has been another fantastic year for University Rugby League. The standard of the representative teams keeps improving and the BUCS competition keeps growing. We have more registered players than ever before and the number of university teams engaging keeps growing.”
The RFL began to work with the Association of Colleges (AOC) and Sport England to re-shape Rugby League’s offer to the Further Education sector during 2014.

There have been some significant changes in the colleges sport sector and the RFL is working with key national partners to ensure the Rugby League offer is fit for purpose and is developed around the needs of the participants within the sector.

A new offer was launched with a key focus of engaging colleges with Rugby League throughout the curriculum and not just on the pitch.

A highlight of the 2014 colleges programme was the introduction of a new women’s competition. The offer, which is based around festival formats, has been designed to keep girls who have previously played in the Champion Schools programme, or who play in the community, engaged during the academic term.

Two pilot festivals were run in the North West and the North East, with a total of six new teams participating.

Competition

The league structure for the 2013-14 college season consisted of five leagues with the following teams finishing top of their respective tables:

- Northern Premier 1A (North West) – Hopwood Hall College
- Northern Premier 1B (Yorkshire) – Carmel College
- Northern 2A (North West) – New College Pontefract
- Northern 2B (Yorkshire) – Calderdale College
- Northern 3B (Yorkshire) – Calderdale A

The National College Cup saw Calderdale College and Hopwood Hall College reach the final after some impressive results in the earlier rounds. The final proved to be a physical encounter with Calderdale College winning 50-6 and being crowned 2014 National College Cup winners.

Representative

The re-named English College Lionhearts went on a four-day tour of Belgium in May 2014 to play against the Belgium national side. The Lionhearts are made up of a selection of the best players playing in the College Rugby League competition.

The Lionhearts confirmed their strength and ability by capping off a rewarding tour with an emphatic 72-6 win against the Belgium open age team in Brussels.

RFL Education Officer Steve Guan said: “It’s an exciting time for College Rugby League as we’re starting to gain some stability within our competition structure.

“The development of new initiatives is starting to have an impact with the number of colleges and sixth forms getting involved in activity.”
Castelford Academy crowned a remarkable year in the Champion Schools competition when their Year 7 Boys beat The Brooksbank School of Halifax in the traditional curtain-raiser to the Challenge Cup final at Wembley Stadium.

Of the eight Champion Schools finals in 2014, Castelford Academy appeared in six, winning five of them, including the Wembley triumph. They beat Brooksbank 36-14 with Bailey O’Connor taking the player of the match award following his hat-trick and immaculate goal kicking - he converted all of his side’s six tries.

The rest of the finals were played at the Richmond Athletic Association grounds in Surrey on Friday, August 22. Castelford Academy’s Year 7 Girls preceded the boys triumph at Wembley with victory at Richmond against Halton’s Wade Deacon High School, the North West champions.

The Year 8 Girls final was contested between St Peter’s RC High School from...
Manchester and Sirius Academy (Hull) with the Hull side winning 24-12.

Castleford Academy’s Year 8 Boys were victorious over fellow West Yorkshire side St Wilfrid’s High School while Castleford Academy’s Year 9 Girls beat Ossett Academy.

Warrington’s Great Sankey High School succumbed to South Holderness College from Hull in the Year 9 Boys final.

The one blip in the march of Castleford Academy came in the Year 10 Girls final when they played Leigh Academy of Dartford in Kent. The Kent girls had won the Year 9 title in 2013 and became the first team from the South to claim back-to-back titles with an impressive 48-12 victory over the Yorkshire side.

Castleford Academy got back on track in the final game of the day at Richmond with their Year 10 Boys beating St Peter and Paul High School of Widnes 36-16.

RFL Education Officer Steve Guan said: “This year the Champion Schools competition saw over 1,300 boys and girls teams take part from over 500 schools throughout England and Wales. With each school starting the competition at local level there are so many fantastic stories of schools, many new to the game, having initial success within these local competitions and then moving through to their regional stages and, if successful, then the national stages.

“The most rewarding aspect for me is to see the geographical spread of schools taking part throughout the competition not only in the local and regional stages but making it through into the national stages and representing their school at the finals weekend. Over the last few years southern schools have become formidable opponents, the Year 10 Girls from Leigh Academy in Dartford being a prime example this year. I believe this will continue as Rugby League in schools spreads and new institutions take up the game.”

Recognising the work put in off the field Guan, said: “Champion Schools coordinators are the gatekeepers of the competition and manage each local stage. Without their time, energy and support the competition would not take place or be the success it is. Our Reward and Recognition programme gives us the opportunity to say ‘thank you’ to these individuals on a personal level and also acknowledge their school or organisation that supports their role.”

One particular success this year was the use of neutral venues in round one at Years 10 and 11. This created a great atmosphere and a schools Magic Weekend-type of event and led to it being rolled out across all age groups for 2014-15.

Along with young players, the Champion Schools has been a stepping stone for some of the young match officials in the sport who are looking to reach the pinnacle of officiating.

In the past, the Wembley curtain-raiser has seen some of Super League’s current crop of match officials progress up the ladder, including Chris Leatherbarrow and Warren Turley.

Tim Roby, now a match official in the NRL, christened the new Wembley in 2007 by refereeing the curtain-raiser for the Challenge Cup final between St Helens and Catalans Dragons.

Play Touch Rugby League is a licensed participant product which was launched in 2014 after two years of development. Since its launch, the product has grown to deliver activity in 50 profitable licensed sites across England with 3,500 players attracted by the exciting new social offer.

Play Touch RL was created and developed to provide a sustainable delivery model to allow organisations to run profitable licenced sites. The ultimate aim was to extend people’s playing careers, attract new players or allowing people to return to Rugby League in a minimal contact version of the sport that suits their busy lifestyles.

In 2014 the average age of Play Touch RL participants ranged from 22 to 45 with the oldest being 74. The diverse range of players in the programme is one of its real strengths with brothers and sisters, wives and husband, grandads and grandsons all playing within the same teams. Across the board only 20 per cent of all participants are registered at a community club, which shows the great accessibility of the game. It was also great to see that 15 per cent of all participants are women.

To support the delivery, over 400 ‘action visits’ were conducted at licensed sites. The aim was to gain a greater understanding of what the customer desires from a service by listening to feedback and making quick and speedy improvements. This has involved a ‘mystery shopper’ programme using a group of trained participants to rate licensed site delivery and identify any potential gaps. This has certainly highlighted the fact that the licence model does work and licensees are delivering a fantastic product.

To support the delivery, the Play Touch RL team has assessed every touch point with the customer in a licensed environment to understand what they want and where they go to find information. A great example of this involves reviewing monthly website data and understanding where a participant goes online and what section of the website they spend their time on most. The team has used this insight to develop more suitable content online that ensures the participant has a better experience. This has led to increased views on the playtouchrugbyleague.co.uk website.

To launch the year and the new product we created our first innovated marketing campaign – ‘Why Work Out When You Can Play’. In total, the campaign had a reach of nearly 16 million people, with exposure on BBC Sport, the Daily Express, The Mail on Sunday and Sky Sports News. To support the campaign we ran a number of roadshows, where we went directly to the fans and ex-players to encourage them to take up this exciting non-contact sport. This culminated in a big presence at Magic Weekend with 1,000 people signing up.

Mike Horrocks, who was involved in the original pilot programme, said: “We are now into our second year of running a Play Touch Rugby League licence. We can definitely see a step up from year one, especially in regards to marketing and general support and feel across the country, the fact 50 licences are running is great.

“As with last year, it’s really easy and straightforward. With all the support and resources you get from the RFL, it’s hard to go wrong. It’s a great way to expand the provision of the community club and have a greater reach and connection with the local community.”

The year ended with the Community Awards at the Super League Grand Final which saw the inaugural awards for Licensee of the Year, Player of the Year and Referee of the Year. The same event also saw a celebration of Play Touch RL with all the licensees and partners.
Massive strides were taken by Rugby League Cares in 2014 with good progress across their four good causes during the course of the year.

Jamie Peacock of Leeds Rhinos and League 13 joined the board of trustees to represent players and provide a boost for the charity’s profile.

One of the areas that has seen significant achievements in 2014 was the distribution of grants to different parts of the game, ranging from community to professional.

Twenty-two different projects benefited to the tune of £32,000 from grants including the student game as well as community tours, with £1,000 grants aiding five tours.

The Community Game Raffle brought in an additional £42,000 for community clubs and Rugby League Cares, a fundraising venture that was partnered by Rhino Rugby League.

The majority of successful applications centred on a project to provide education for coaches to work in schools with the aim of targeting new players.

The welfare programme is supportive of every aspect of Rugby League, from current professionals to former players and those involved in the community game.

The Past Players’ committee re-named their programme Rugby League Cares ‘Reunions’ which coincided with a new central database of ex-players. Eighty per cent of Yorkshire clubs and 30 per cent of clubs based in the North West have had data collected, with support offered to Cumbria and London.

Colin Maskill, Mike Nicholas and Dave Howes have all become voluntary representatives for Yorkshire, the North West and London respectively, to promote the programme.

The welfare programme hosted two successful events in 2014 with the centenary of the Rorke’s Drift Test commemorated by a lunch held in July.

Malcolm Reilly OBE and Willie Horne were inducted into the Hall of Fame at a dinner hosted by Rugby League Cares in November.

Over 200 people were in attendance for the Year of Health and Wellbeing conference at the AJ Bell Stadium to promote the myriad of great projects delivered by Rugby League benefiting public health. Many involved in health at local level attended, which resulted in an increase in activity.

Following the closing of the Rugby League Heritage museum at the George Hotel in Huddersfield, Rugby League Cares moved to carry on showcasing its heritage collection. A £140,000 grant came from the Heritage Lottery Fund and the University of Huddersfield, with the funds being used in a variety of ways.

The grant has been used to purchase the collection of memorabilia belonging to Mike Stephenson, the Sky Sports pundit, who had his collection on display in the George Hotel. Other items were secured with a view to forming a travelling exhibition, with Hull hosting the first one during August.

A full-time Heritage Manager was appointed to display the collection.

The book, ‘13 Inspirations’, which celebrates 13 inspirational individuals involved with Rugby League, was published by Scratching Shed Publications to celebrate some of the most significant figures in the sport.

The final area that has seen significant growth in 2014 was the Benevolent Fund. Financial support was used to enhance physiotherapy and educational re-training to help players in all aspects of Rugby League.

The Benevolent Fund isn’t just assisting current players in the sport, but moving into 2015, it will also be coming to the aid of former players.

Luke Byrant, who became severely disabled at the age of 19 during the 1990s, is to be part of a major project by the Benevolent Fund to help him be re-housed.

With continued support from volunteers, these four key areas of Rugby League will continue to progress year on year.
State of Mind continued to blaze a trail alongside the RFL during 2014 by taking mental fitness messages and promoting Rugby League to a range of audiences across the country. The main feature was the State of Mind round of fixtures supported admirably by the RFL and Rugby League Cares.

Round 25 of the First Utility Super League was dedicated to State of Mind with fixtures taking place on August 28, 29, 31 with match attendances totalling 69,306 at an average of 9,900 supporters at each game. State of Mind mental fitness cards were given out to over 5,500 fans and many were engaged in conversations.

“If it wasn’t for State of Mind I wouldn’t be at the match today,” said one. “I was going to kill myself last year but spoke to someone from State of Mind and changed my mind, got help and now I am going to be a grandad. Thanks so much without you I would be dead.”

Another said: “I’ve got bi-polar. What State of Mind are doing is breaking down stigma using my favourite sport, outstanding!”

There were a record number of volunteers at the games during Round 25.

Sky Sports and State of Mind were rewarded with a MIND Media Award in 2014 for the features by Brian Carney and Angela Powers during the 2013 campaign. The award took place at the British Film Institute on the South Bank in London. Premier Sports showed the State of Mind family trailer during their NRL coverage in August 2014.

Paul Farmer, CEO of MIND Charity, the largest mental health charity in the UK, attended his first-ever game of Rugby League during the State of Mind Round in 2014 and said: “What a fantastic thing to see so many people in T-shirts challenging stigma.”

In 2014, State of Mind presented at the MIND AGM in Leeds to all the chief executives from MIND groups across the UK.

State of Mind delivered mental fitness sessions across the country to 2,345 people during 2014 and Twitter ambassadors, including Paul Wellens and Eorl Crabtree, and sent out mental fitness messages during the week of the State of Mind fixtures which amassed a total of 4,351,492 followers.

State of Mind continued to work closely with Emma Rosewarne and Sporting Chance to facilitate help and support for players, fans and communities across the Rugby League family.

State of Mind featured on BBC TV’s Panorama programme for the innovative ‘Boot Room’ project piloted with Warrington Wolves. They were featured in the programme as an example of positive initiatives to encourage mental fitness and prevent suicide using the power of classic Rugby League games to reduce social isolation.

In 2015 State of Mind are hoping to sign a two-year partnership agreement with Rugby League Cares to take the State of Mind round of fixtures to even more people across the country and the world with the NRL State of Mind campaign.

Achieving high standards and good practice for 2014...

Last year’s report stated that the focus for 2014 was to achieve high standards and good practice at all Super League clubs with transferable systems and quality outputs for players. During 2014 a number of clubs improved their player welfare provision considerably, although there are still clubs that gave cause for concern. A number of clubs are now delivering excellence in this area, others are developing their provision quickly whilst it is very disappointing to report that a small number are still substandard.

The RFL continued to develop central provision in all key areas which can be drawn down by the individual club and/ or player. This has the advantage of ensuring that the player welfare model is similar in all clubs and that services are transferable when players move from club to club.

As the policy attempts to mirror the welfare provision in the NRL it is becoming increasingly transferable as players move to and from the NRL and Super League and strong relationships with the NRL Welfare Department have been forged.

During 2014 considerable time was spent in revising the Player Welfare Policy to take account of changes over the last three years and in drawing up delivery standards to sit alongside the Policy. This work should help in continuing to increase the quality of Player Welfare delivery across clubs and to assist in standardisation and transferability. The Player Welfare Policy and accompanying Standards are published on the RFL website.

The majority of clubs held a MHFA Lite training session either on their own or shared with a neighbouring club for their coaching and physio staff. In addition a MHFA Lite session was held for Super League coaches at the end of one of their meetings.

The PWS also allows the RFL Welfare Department to monitor the input by PWMs and to draw down statistics in key areas such as careers and education. However the RFL cannot see any private notes on a player’s record.

MENTAL HEALTH AND WELL BEING

Sporting Chance
The relationship with Sporting Chance continued to be fundamental to the Player Welfare programme. The number of players accessing services continued to rise on an annual basis from two in 2011, to around 30 in 2012, to 50 in 2013 and around 70 in 2014. In 2014 there were eight players who attended the Sporting Chance Clinic for residential treatment, a considerable increase on previous years.

Sporting Chance (Tony Adams MBE & Colin Bland) together with Tony Smith and some players made a presentation to the SLE meeting in October which gave CEOs and Chairmen a good insight into the number and type of issues Sporting Chance is helping players with.

Mental Health First Aid (MHFA)
The RFL held a two-day MHFA course early in the year for PWMs who had not already obtained the qualification and later in the season a group of 16 first team players with a personal interest in this area from a cross section of clubs attended a two-day MHFA course.

The majority of clubs held a MHFA Lite training session either on their own or shared with a neighbouring club for their coaching and physio staff. In addition a MHFA Lite session was held for Super League coaches at the end of one of their meetings.

Social & Non-Prescribed Prescription Drug (SNPDD) Policy
The SNPDD Policy was finalised and rolled out began with education workshops held for first team squads at all Super League clubs during the year to inform players about the policy, increase awareness about the issues and encourage players to come forward for help. The policy is driven by welfare concerns and is not intended to be punitive. The testing programme began early in 2015.

Gambling
It became clear during the year that there is a substantial problem with gambling addiction amongst the professional players with Sporting Chance reporting an increase on the number of referrals and Yorkshire Bank helping more players to resolve the financial issues caused by their addiction. In addition several of the players making a residential stay at the Sporting Chance Clinic were referred due to gambling addiction.

The Welfare Director and a number of PWMs attended the Professional Players’ Federation conference on Problem Gambling in Sport in December at which research from football and cricket was published showing that professional sportsmen tend to have a higher propensity to problem gambling than the population at large. The RFL was offered the opportunity to take part in the second tranche of research in early 2015.

Tackling the area of problem gambling will be a priority area for 2015.

LIFE STYLE & PERSONAL DEVELOPMENT

Social media
The RFL introduced a Social Media Policy for distribution to players. The majority of clubs ran one or more internal workshops for players detailing the dangers and potential benefits of a social media presence.

Presentation skills
The RFL provided presentation skills workshops with Speak the Speech (providers to rugby union and cricket) to help develop players confidence and skills in public speaking. The feedback was overwhelmingly positive.

FINANCE AND CONTRACTUAL

Yorkshire Bank
Yorkshire Bank continued to provide a good service to players. In particular their help in resolving debt issues (usually caused by gambling addiction, payday loans or marital breakdown) was critical. A number of clubs now have regular visits from Yorkshire Bank which allows informal meetings with the players whether or not they are private banking customers. In addition an increasing number of clubs use the Yorkshire Bank service which sets up bank accounts in this country ready for overseas players to access on arrival.

Career Ending Insurance
The RFL continued to explore the possibility of a game wide career ending insurance policy but currently hasn’t been able to find an affordable solution to this problem.
CAREERS

Career Workshops & One-to-Ones
The take up of career workshops and one-to-ones continued to increase with good feedback from players on the content and helpfulness of both workshops and one-to-ones.

Personal Development Plan (PDP)
2014 saw the introduction of standardised PDP which can be attached to the player’s record. This is usually produced by the career coach following a careers one-to-one and shared with the player, PWM and the Welfare department. The PDP sets objectives and action points which will help the player achieve his career goals.

Career Engaged
The purpose of the career workshops and one-to-ones is to help players prepare for their career after Rugby League whilst they are playing. With this objective in mind the Player Welfare Policy measures “Engaged in Education or Career Training” as the main KPI in this area. The definition of ‘Engaged’ is a player who is exploring options or has decided on his post Rugby League career path and that he is taking action to achieve that.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING

RL Cares Grants for Training and Education
The RFL continued to donate 80 per cent of all money raised from fines to Rugby League Cares for use as a Training and Education Fund (the remaining 20 per cent is donated to the RFL Benevolent Fund). There was a significant increase in the number of applications against the Fund with around £60k being awarded in grants.

European Social Fund/Warrington Collegiate Courses
A considerable proportion of the players that took courses in 2013 went on to study further so the objective of running the courses as means of encouraging players back into training and/or education appears to have worked.

Warrington Collegiate ran a L1 Electrician’s course at Castleford Tigers’ ground for Yorkshire-based players. The course was doubly oversubscribed and again a large proportion of those players who did get places on the course went on to enrol on further courses for 2015.

Functional Skills
One of the KPIs for the Player Welfare programme is to ensure that all players obtain Functional Skills at L2 in English, Maths and ICT before leaving the game. The current government focus on all school/college leavers having Functional Skills will leave those players who left school without achieving Functional Skills at a huge disadvantage in the job market. Warrington Collegiate have provided access to their online Functional Skills system for all clubs.

TRANSITION

General
Many players struggle with transition some with fairly disastrous consequences for their lives, usually but not always short term. Unfortunately there are still a significant number of players leaving the full-time game ill-prepared for life post-RL either emotionally, financially or career wise. In 2014 the RFL provided assistance in one form or another to around 20 recently retired players who are struggling in one way or another. The support is usually either access to Sporting Chance’s services and/or career advice and RL Cares education and training grants. Although there is substantive research to show that a proportion of professional players from all sports suffer emotionally regardless of how well prepared they are for the transition, it is also clear that where players are financially secure and have a second career that they are ready and happy to take up, the emotional strain of leaving a team environment is likely to be alleviated.

Transition Meeting
In 2014, for the first time, the RFL held a transition meeting for those players who through choice (or otherwise) did not have a full-time playing contract for 2015 by September 1, 2014. The purpose of the meeting was to help prepare them for transition by giving them an opportunity to explore, in a safe environment, some of the emotional turmoil that they may face in the future and allowing them to meet those welfare partners who remain available to them after leaving the game.

The format was informal with lunch followed by a thank you address by the RFL CEO, then a workshop with Sporting Chance and some recently retired players outlining some of the issues that players may face on retirement, some of the coping strategies and how to get help, in particular how to use counselling as a preventive tool. There was also an opportunity to meet with the career coaches and a “speed dating” session to allow the players to meet briefly with the RFL, RL Cares, RL Learning, Yorkshire Bank and the RLPA to gain awareness of the welfare services which remain available to them.

The feedback from the players that did attend was excellent and the event will be repeated in 2015 with the learning points from 2014 being put into effect.

ANDY RALEIGH

Former Super League forward Andy Raleigh on how he got involved with player welfare, and the way the system has progressed.

“When I started playing, it’s come on massively. The fact that it’s in place now and every club has someone looking after players is a really big thing going forward.”
The sport’s most exclusive club welcomed two new members to its ranks in 2014 when Malcolm Reilly OBE and Willie Horne were inducted into the Rugby League Hall of Fame.

The inductions took place at a celebratory dinner hosted by Rugby League Cares at Huddersfield in October and saw Malcolm and Willie, who was represented by his widow, Bessie, become the 22nd and 23rd members of the Hall of Fame.

They were welcomed into the game’s pantheon by fellow Hall of Fame inductees Garry Schofield OBE, Billy Boston MBE, Roger Millward MBE, Lewis Jones, Neil Fox MBE and Tom Van Vollenhoven, who flew in from his home in South Africa to attend.

Hailed as Barrow’s favourite son, Willie Horne captained Barrow, Lancashire, England and Great Britain between 1943 and 1959.

Courageous and inspiring, Horne played for England between 1945-53 scoring 38 points in 14 games, in addition to representing Great Britain on eight occasions during the 1946-52 seasons, scoring 20 points.

Malcolm Reilly’s playing career spanned three decades, during which he cemented his reputation as one of the games genuine hard men. Reilly debuted for Castleford aged 19 and played for his home town in two stints, first between 1967 and 1971 and then between 1974 and 1986 after returning from a successful stint in Australia with Manly.

The loose forward won the Lance Todd trophy with Castleford in their 11-6 victory over Salford in 1969. Reilly appeared at Wembley again the following year in Castleford’s 7-2 triumph over Wigan.

He coached Castleford to a Wembley victory in 1986 and enjoyed success in the 1997 Australian Grand Final as coach of Newcastle Knights.

The 2014 inductions followed on from a similar event in 2013 when, after an eight-year hiatus, four new members were inducted into the Hall of Fame: Lewis Jones, Martin Offiah MBE, Mick Sullivan and Garry Schofield OBE.

Two more inductions are planned for the autumn of 2015, taking the total of Hall of Fame members to 25 in a year that will see the sport celebrate its 120th anniversary.

Membership of the Rugby League Hall of Fame is restricted exclusively to the greatest Rugby League players of all time. Each player must have:

- A record of outstanding achievement at the very highest levels of the game;
- A reputation that transcends the era in which he played;
- Made a contribution to the game that will last as long as Rugby League is played.

To be eligible for nomination to the Rugby League Hall of Fame, players must have:

- Played professional Rugby League in the UK for at least 10 years;
- Played their last professional match in the UK at least 10 years before the date of the Hall of Fame induction ceremony.
September 2014 saw the merger of the Professional Game Operations and Community Game Services departments, together with the Legal and Welfare and Safeguarding teams, to create a new Operations and Legal Department. At the same time Karen Moorhouse (former Head of Legal) was appointed as the director of the new department.

The newly-merged department seeks to ensure that our internal systems and processes reflect the Whole Game Solution that we continue to strive to achieve across the RFL and Rugby League.

The new department brings together a wealth of knowledge from all tiers of the sport. There are four sub-teams within the department: Operations; Registrations and Salary Cap; Welfare and Safeguarding; and Legal and Compliance.

The Operations team is headed up by Kelly Barrett, who has almost 20 years of experience within the community game. This team has responsibility for administrating competitions across all tiers of the game, including the compilation and management of fixtures and results and managing the disciplinary systems. In addition the team monitors compliance with the Facility Standards.

The Registrations and Salary Cap Team is headed up by Samantha Allen. Sam joined the RFL over seven years ago having previously worked at Wakefield Trinity Wildcats. This team is responsible for the registration of all players and all other individuals (including agents, coaches, first aiders, and club welfare officers) across all tiers of the game and for managing all Operational Rules that relate to all such individuals. In addition the team manage the Super League, Championship and League 1 Salary Caps.

Emma Rosewarne is our Welfare Director. Emma has over 30 years experience within the sport. The Welfare team seeks to ensure the welfare of all participants in the game. In relation to professional players this includes health and mental well-being, financial... and lifestyle advice and training and education for post-Rugby League careers. In relation to the community game, their focus is on ensuring compliance with the Safeguarding Policy. The team also lead on medical standards and equality and diversity across the whole game.

Graeme Sarjeant is the Head of Legal having previously held the role of Compliance Manager. The team advise all other departments on all legal matters including the application of Operational Rules and the negotiation of all contracts (such as media, commercial and consultancy agreements).

Dean Hardman, Compliance Manager, is responsible for investigating and prosecuting breaches of the Operational Rules.

Internally we are already seeing the benefits of the merger with the sharing of best practices from the former departments. This should ensure the department continually delivers a high quality service to the sport.
Internationally the sport continued to prosper in 2014 with more nations joining the RLEF and members continuing to mature in their roles as national federations. An example of this maturation is Rugby League Ireland, which benefitted for the first time from Irish Sport Council funding in 2014.

In February, Spain became the 18th European Union affiliate, further increasing the Federation’s European dimension. The benefit European Commission engagement has had on the RLEF’s ability to grow and administer the game in Europe and its surrounding territories cannot be understated.

Europe has had a remarkable effect on the RLEF’s ability to operate and extend the sport’s boundaries. Succeeding the Governance Foundation Project (2012-13), the complementary Leadership Devolution Project, launched in January 2014, is designed to continue to impart the principles of good governance and devolve strategic leadership from the sport’s historically Anglo-French core by giving more responsibility to the five most senior RLEF nations, mentoring five younger nations; and for those four in turn to mentor the seven youngest Programme Countries.

The last London Congress for a few years attracted a record attendance from the members, with nine of 11 Full and six of eight Affiliate Members present and exercising their constitutional rights. 2014 was undoubtedly the Board of Directors’ busiest year. Elections conducted in July saw the members return Scotland’s Graeme Thompson and Serbia’s Nebojsa Sretenovic to the Board. Paul Nicholson, who was co-opted onto the Board late in 2013, served his first full year and will continue to focus his attention on developing the RLEF’s relationship with broadcasters in an effort to generate additional revenue, especially for the European Championship tournaments.

In May, Nigel Wood was elected chairman of the Rugby League International Federation, becoming the first English chair since Maurice Lindsay. Nigel is a keen advocate of the sport’s international expansion and a great supporter of the RLEF.

In August, the RLEF reached the halfway point of its eight-year strategy. The report delivered to the members at the Congress in August illustrated the progress the Federation is making in key strategic areas, namely domestic competition development, technical education, strengthening member capacity through good governance, and improving the RLEF’s central performance.

There are now 18 nations with domestic championships compared with 12 four years ago. To support this growing number of competitions, the RLEF has trained and qualified 16 coach educators and 14 match officials with, for the first time, non-Anglo-French personnel licensed to deliver Level 1 courses trans-nationally across Europe. This trend will continue in the future as the European dimension of the RLEF grows.

Eleven nations have government recognition compared with seven in 2010. This number is set to increase when Rugby League achieves membership of SportAccord. The RLEF work closely with the RLIF, which lodged the application for membership of SportAccord, the umbrella group for Olympic and non-Olympic sports. Affiliation with SportAccord is crucial to so many members, as a large number of governments now determine a sport's legitimacy solely based on whether it has SportAccord recognition or not.

Government recognition is a sign of an organisation settling into its national sporting landscape. A sign of the progress being made in this area is the elevation in members. There are now 11 Full Members compared with five in 2010; eight Affiliates compared with five; and 12 Observers compared with eight.

Prior to 2010, the RLEF had not raised any external funding; this compares with €525,000 generated in the four-year period 2010-14. The bulk of that investment has been from the European Commission, with UK Sport International and private sponsors contributing the rest.

On the field, Scotland and Greece were respective winners of the European Championship and European Championship C. Scotland, finalists in 2009, won the competition for the first time with Scotland Rugby League reporting that the victory generated more national press coverage than the World Cup campaign a year earlier.

In June there was African involvement in the sport's first ever Commonwealth Championship, contested by eight nations from five of six Commonwealth regions. This is part of a long-term, RLIF-led initiative to affiliate with omnisports organisations such as the Commonwealth Games Federation. SportAccord membership and then IOC affiliation are the next two objectives.

The RLEF's competition calendar, reorganised before the 2012 season, continues to provide a stable framework for aspiring nations to plan, improve their organisational capacity, not to mention their technical level. Championship B saw some great matches and ended with three teams locked on six competition points. It has provided precisely the right amount of football for the participants, allowing them to organise other initiatives around their three annual matches and all the organisations have improved both on and off the field as a result of their participation.

As the Federation looks forward, one of the most important challenges is the commercialisation of the European Championship, which represents the RLEF's ability to grow the business to support the increasing amount of Rugby League activity in Europe. Although matches from past tournaments have been televised, the competition as a whole has never had its own television deal. The 2014 edition witnessed some wonderful matches and came down to the last minute of the last game - that the Rugby League public were denied the chance to watch most of the games needs to be addressed.

In addition to constantly upholding high standards of governance and emphasising domestic championship growth, enlarging the visibility and value of the European Championship will be a key objective going forward. Coupled with the RLIF's own hard work on the global calendar, success in this area will see Rugby League reach new levels in the near future.
We are delighted to report that the RFL has achieved another strong year of turnover of £19,222k in 2014 (2013: £19,899k). The record turnover for the sport in 2013 was due to the consolidation within the accounts of the financial performance of Rugby League World Cup 2013, managed and organised by the RFL in 2013, which took place in England, Wales and France. However, as the 2013 World Cup was a one-off event, this will clearly distort the year on year comparisons. It should be noted that without the World Cup activity the year on year consolidated turnovers would have been much closer in number, with a reduction to £19,080k in 2014 from £19,385k in 2013.

Match income saw a significant decrease from £9,285k in 2013 to £2,902k in 2014. However, this reduction was entirely due to the World Cup matches in 2013. Excluding the World Cup income the level of match income has increased year on year from £2,755k in 2013 to £2,891k in 2014.

Not staging a World Cup in 2014 also had a negative impact on Sponsorship Monies, which saw a 63.9 per cent decrease in these funds which moved to £776k (2013: £2,149k). However, excluding the World Cup income, this income remained static at £764k (2013: £763k).

Grant income received decreased from £8,744k in 2013 to £4,916k primarily due to the additional income received in 2013 for the World Cup. Excluding the World Cup-related income, this element of turnover has decreased from £5,956k in 2013 to £4,916k in 2014.

As with other funding streams, the World Cup also accounted for a decrease in broadcast income of 41.9 per cent with income generated decreasing from £9,916k in 2013 to £5,757k in 2014. All other existing RFL long term BBC and British Sky Broadcasting contracts continued in line with previous years.

Within the RFL accounts, the cost of sales heading is broken down into two sections. The first being the external, third party costs of making the sale and the second being those costs of sales that are internal to the RFL’s stakeholders such as payments directly made to clubs. External cost of sales decreased in 2014 by 53.4 per cent from the 2013 figure of £19,899k to £9,270k. This was again primarily due to the increased cost of staging the World Cup.

Payments to and on behalf of clubs is made up from the cost of sales element of £2,235k (2013: £2,459k) and a further amount shown below Gross Profit on the Profit and Loss Account, which in 2014 brought the total payable to and on behalf of clubs to £6,582k (2013: £6,583k). While the overall amount has remained constant it is worth noting that there were movements on individual elements, notably a decrease in central prize monies paid and an increase of TV distributions paid out (due to a signing-on fee paid to Championship clubs early in 2014).

The RFL has a policy of continuously monitoring operating costs. Whilst in 2014, these costs have decreased significantly to £3,132k from £8,226k in 2013 this decrease can be attributed entirely to the staging of the World Cup in 2013, in particular the cost of the Staging Fee for the rights to host the World Cup of £3.5m. Removing the World Cup expenses, the operating costs for the core business are £2,967k, representing a 7.6 per cent increase on 2013’s equivalent figure of £2,756k. This increase is over a number of expenditure lines.

Once again, it is worth noting that interest receivable by the RFL, which has historically been a very significant income stream, was again low at £59k (2013: £71k). The relatively low amount is a result of the general economic impact felt from banks offering much lower interest rates over the last five years.

Given the underlying economic issues, it is pleasing to report that for the thirteenth year in succession the RFL has posted a pre-tax profit, on this occasion of £295k (2013: £172k).

FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS

2015 will be the first year of the RFL’s new seven-year Strategic Plan. The Plan has the customer at its heart and looks particularly at broadcast viewers, spectators at games; participants playing the sport at all levels; and of course winning internationally.

The current broadcast contract with British Sky Broadcasting was due to expire at the end of 2016. However, at the start of 2014, a new contract was negotiated to cover the period 2017 to 2021 thereby extending our relationship with Sky to beyond 30 years. The new contract, which sees record levels of investment from British Sky Broadcasting, ensures that more matches than ever before will be shown live on TV with both Super League and Championship clubs benefiting from the increased exposure. The clubs will not only enjoy financial stability during the next seven years but the game as a whole will benefit from the investment made by BSkyB across every level, including investment in the community game.

Following the success of the switch to a summer playing season, the community game has seen more participants engaging with the sport than ever before. The RFL has aspirations for the community game to become less dependent on government funding in the future, whilst ensuring that activity at the grassroots level is maintained or bettered. The sport regularly sees the introduction of new initiatives to deliver this aspiration. The Play Touch Rugby League programme continues to grow - this initiative encompasses a franchise model, generating additional income for the sport whilst also increasing participation. It is expected that this will see further significant growth through 2015. In addition the relationship between the community game’s many stakeholders and the RFL will be further strengthened in the next few years with the roll out of a formal membership structure of the RFL for all clubs, leagues and organisations who wish to directly affiliate.

SUMMARY

The trading results in 2014 were once again strong and signs for the future of the game are promising. The conclusion of a new BSkyB broadcast contract provides stability through to 2021 for both the RFL and its member clubs and we are therefore, convinced in the RFL’s ability to continue to execute its strategy through 2015 and beyond.

We would like to close by thanking the clubs, volunteers, staff and everyone associated with Rugby League for their hard work and support throughout the year, and look forward to the challenges that 2015 will bring.
